Tornados (NCIC)

Tornados can occur anywhere in the U.S. at any time of the year. They are most likely to occur between 3 and 9 pm, however they have been known to occur at all hours of the day or night. It is a myth that areas near water are safe from tornados. No place is safe. Tornadoes have occurred on mountains, near large bodies of water, and in downtown areas of major cities.

Watch vs. Warning

A tornado watch means the conditions are right for tornado development, but none have been sighted. A tornado warning means a tornado has been sighted and there is imminent danger for people in the warning area. Tornadoes develop so rapidly that advance warning is not always possible.

Warning Signs

- A dark, often greenish sky
- A “wall cloud,” or section of cloud that protrudes lower than the main cloud
- Rotation in the clouds
- Large hail
- Flying debris
- A loud roar similar to a freight train

Safety Guidelines

- Move to a lower level or basement.
- If no lower level is available, move to an interior room or hallway on the lowest floor and get under a sturdy piece of furniture.
- Stay away from windows.
- Cover your head and make yourself the smallest target possible.
- Do not try to out run a tornado in your car; instead, get out of the vehicle and seek safer shelter in a nearby building.
- If you are outside and there is no shelter immediately available, avoid trees and vehicles. Do not get under an overpass or bridge. You are safer in a low, flat location. Lie flat in a nearby ditch or depression and cover your head with your hands .
